

MATT MORSON

Opening for Doc Walker at Canada's Nashville North was the start of a ride that is quickly taking this country artist to stardom.

Born on October 12, 1992 Matt Morson, picked up his first guitar at age 11 to master Led Zeppelin's "Communication Breakdown".

Coming from a small town in rural Ontario, Matt inherited his passion for country music from his parents and used his love for music as a way to express his inner art.

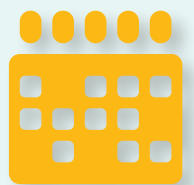

As the years went on, Morson started to work with various music festivals, assisting in production and general event logistics. Over time, Matt grew a desire to perform and eventually landed himself a chance to perform on stage.

Morson's charismatic presence and ability to connect with audience is what's led him to several notable performances since the start of his career including opening for Doc Walker at Nashville North. His dedication to music has him on the country roster in Canada and the US regularly, and his singles "Wanted Man" and "Girl on the Bar" have been picked up by radio in Canada and the US.

Matt Morson dreams of building his way to the top with a new album release and in time, becoming a recognizable face in country music worldwide. Not one to expect opportunities to come lightly, Morson spends the bulk of his free time in studio, recording and rehearsing with his band. His remaining time is spent with his dog Millie, a regular on his instagram.
